

THE BAND

The Deviators came together recently, but the three of them have been around Dublin music for decades. Between Bitzy, Bren and Andy, the trail runs through The Strougers, The End, The Cathedral, The Lee Harveys, Trouble Pilgrims, Clash Jam Wallop, The Modfathers and a fair few other bands along the way.

The songs are all new: short, melodic, high-energy punk and guitar pop, played with the sort of urgency that comes from knowing exactly what a live room needs. There is plenty of history in the band, but they are not interested in recreating it.

Their first album, More Volume, Less Reverb, produced by Stano, is nearly ready to go. Recent shows have included a special-guest slot with Rocky De Valera and the Gravediggers at their sold-out Grand Social reunion. Next up is The Last Days of Dalymount.

"The Deviators bounced onstage with the energy of a trio of 20 year olds. Their merch was brilliant, the songs were riotous and the crowd ate up every second of it. Will have to see those lads again soon..."
